HOW TO CURE CONSUMPTION.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT MEDICINES.—Will people never learn to know that a diseased liver and stomach necessarily disease the entire system? The plainest principles of common sense teach this and yet there are hundreds who ridicule the idea, and continue in the course which almost inevitably brings them prematurely to the grave. Living as the majority of the people do, at complete variance with the laws of nature, it must be apparent to all that, sooner or later, nature will revenge herself. Hence we find that persons who indulge to excess in the use of very rich or indigestible food or intoxicating drinks, invariably pay a heavy penalty in the end. The stomach becomes disordered and refuses to act; the liver fails to perform its functions, dyspepsia and its attendant evils follow, and still the suffering individuals persist in clinging to the thoroughly exploded idea of the past. Dr. SCHENK'S medicines are recommended to all such. They bring sure and certain relief wherever they are used as directed, and all that is necessary to establish their reputation with every ailing man or woman in the land is a fair and impartial trial of them. Let those who are skeptical on this point, and who have permitted interested persons to prejudice them against these now celebrated remedies for consumption, discard their prejudices, and be governed by the principles of reason and common sense. If the system is disordered depend upon it, in nine cases out of ten the seat of the disorder will be found in the stomach and liver. To cleanse and invigorate the stomach and to stimulate the liver to healthy action, use

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS.—The daily increasing demand for these pills in the best evidence of their value. Thousands upon thousands of boxes are sold daily. Why? Simply because they act promptly and efficiently. Invalids who may not find it convenient to call on Dr. SCHENCK in person are informed that full and complete directions for use accompany each package of the MANDRAKE PILLS, PULMONIC SYRUP AND SEAWEED TONIC.—These medicines will cure consumption unless the lungs are so far gone that the patient is entirely beyond the reach of medical relief.

It may be asked by those who are not familiar with the virtues of these great remedies, "How do Dr. Schenck's medicines effect their wonderful cures of consumption?"

The answer is a simple one. They begin their work of restoration by bringing the stomach, liver and bowels into an active healthy condition. It is food that cures this formidable disease. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS act on the liver and stomach, promoting healthy secretion, and removing the bile and slime which have resulted from the inactive or torpid condition of those organs, and of the system generally. This sluggish state of the body, and the consequent accumulation of the unhealthy substances named prevent the proper digestion of food, and, as a natural consequence creates disease, which results in prostration and finally in death.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP and SEAWEED TONIC, when taken regularly, mingle with the food, and the digestive organs, make good and rich blood, and as a natural consequence, give flesh and strength to the patient. Let the faculty say what it may, this is the only true cure for consumption. Experience has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt, and thousands are to-day alive and well who a few years since were regarded as hopeless cases, but who were induced to try Dr. SCHENCK'S remedies, and were restored to permanent health by their use.

One of the first steps the physician should take with a consumptive patient is to invigorate the system. Now how is this to be done? Certainly not by giving medicines that exhaust and enervate—medicines that impair instead of improve the functions of the digestive organs. Doctor SCHENCK'S medicines cleanse the stomach and bowels of all substances which are calculated to irritate or weaken them. They create an appetite—promote healthful digestion—make good blood, and, as a consequence, they invigorate and strengthen the entire system and more especially those parts which are diseased. If this cannot be done, then the case must be regarded as a hopeless one.

If the physician finds it impossible to make a patient feel hungry, if the deceased person cannot partake of good nourishing food and properly digest it, it is impossible that he can gain in flesh and strength; and it is equally impossible to bring a patient to this condition so long as the liver is burdened with diseased bile, and the stomach laden with unhealthy slime.

Almost the first request made to the physician by a consumptive patient is that he will prescribe medicines that will allay the cough, night sweats and chills, which are the sure attendants on consumption. But this should not be done, as the cough is only an effort of nature to relieve itself, and the night sweats and chills are caused by the diseased lungs. The remedies ordinarily prescribed do more harm than good. They impair the functions of the stomach, impede healthy digestion, and aggravate rather than cure the disease.

There is, after all, nothing like facts which to substantiate a position, and it is upon facts that Dr. Schenck's relies. Nearly all who have taken his medicines in accordance with his directions have not only been cured of consumption, but, from the fact that these medicines act with wonderful power upon the digestive organs, patients thus cured speedily gain flesh. Cleansing the system of all impurities, they lay the foundation for a solid, substantial structure. Restoring these organs to health, they create an appetite. The food is properly assimilated; the quantity of blood is not only increased, but is made rich and strong and in the face of such a condition of the system all disease must be banished.

Full directions accompany each of the medicines, so that it is not absolutely necessary that patients should see Dr. SCHENCK personally, unless they desire to have their lungs examined. For this purpose he is at his office, No 15 North Sixth St., corner of Commerce, Phila., every Saturday, from 9 A. M. until 1 P. M.

Advice is given without charge, but for a thorough examination with the Respirometer the charge is $5.

H. ROMAN.

THE IRISH EDITOR.

Me father was re'ared as a clerk in Hoboken,
The merchant he clerked for was named Misther Dod;
Of all his young min, there was none like me father
For he was the clerk, sir, that carried the hod.

Wan day he was climbin' upon a steep ladder,
With bricks in his hod and a brick in his hat;
And joost as he shifted his foot for a second,
A rung it gave way, and the ould fool fell flat.

They sint for a coroner and then for a doctor,
The last was too late, and the former was not;
The inquest was held, and a verdict was given
'Twas "death from his drinkin' his whiskey too hot."

And thus I was left, sir, a swate little orphan,
Just twenty years old, and, with nivera cent;
Surrounded be those whose intention was only
To trate me with grace till me fortune was spent.

'Twas lucky I had such a good education,
By raising of makin' the fires for a school;
I wrote with mooch taste, and spoke Greek like a Hebrew—
At least I was told so by Teddy O'Toole.

So, what does I do but I starts a newspaper,
And called it the "Irishman's Morning Gazotte."
Got paper, and printing and "items" on credit,
And talked of the sheet to whoever I met.

Ah, sure, but a mighty nate thing I made of it—
I told of gre at deings before they occurred;
I got up fresh murders for each of me issues,
And blackguarded all that I counted absurd.

I went into politics up to the handle,
And proved that the country was ruined indade;
I called the postmaster a tief and a scoundrel,
And spoke well of free-love, free drinks and free trade.

I treated of things that were doing in Europe,
And wrote editorials all about kings;
I got up an illegant fanny news item
About a strange pig that was threubled wid wings.

I axed advertisements of patent quack dochtors,
I criticised actors and pictures and books,
And whin a subscriber had paid a subscription,
I spake of the affable Mr.——'s good looks."

Och, murther, but didn't I lather the spalpeen
That vainly pretended to edit the "News;"
I called him a mane, egotistical twaddler,
Not worth the tobacco a gintleman chews.

Ah, sure, but an illigant paper I made it,
That illigant paper, the "Morning Gazette;"
And all that was wantin' to finish me fortune,
Was all the subscribers I hadn't got yet.

Wan morning, however, me whole vast edition
Was taken as quick as it came from the press;
The person who took thim was known as the sheriff,
And what was the raisin I leave you to guess.

Thenceforth I retired from the footstool of genius
And took a clerkship with old Misther Dod;
And now, like me father, I'm known to my friends as,
The clerk that makes mortar and carries the hod.

MISS WINTERGREEN'S LUCK.

"Wanted—A Wife."

"And I want a husband!" thought Miss Laurella Wintergreen.

Involuntarily she glanced toward the little mirror which hung between the windows opposite, as if mutely questioning herself as to the remains of her girlhood's beauty. Alas! the convex, too truthful, returned no encouraging verdict. For Miss Laurella Wintergreen was not so young as she had been, some four or five summers ago.

Forty years old, and lean and spare, with hair grown thin on the parting, and little crow's feet forming a latticework around her faded blue eyes. A plump old maid, with cheeks like a fall apple, and laughing, hazel eyes, is not such a disagreeable object to look upon; but a lean, shadowy, so to speak, "dessicated" old maid! Miss Laurella shuddered slightly as she turned away from the uncompromising reflection in the mirror

"Yes," added Miss Laurella Wintergreen to herself, "I DO need a husband. I wonder how that particular paragraph in the paper happened to meet my eye just then. I don't believe in being bold or unfeminine; but what is a poor girl to do when fate has made no provision for the future? I'm sure I should make a good wife. I can cook; I'm handy with my needle; and I have a positive talent for housekeeping; and yet—"

Miss Laurella's sentence ended in a dejected sigh. Surely there was something essentially wrong in the planetary combinations which had glittered over the inauspicious hour of her birth.

"Wanted—A Wife!"

Miss Laurella Wintergreen looked around the scantily furnished little room, and eyed the one tea-cup on the tray, and the solitary pair of well-worn slippers that turned out their toes on the hearth-rug, with a distasteful glance. And then she drew out her memorandum book, jotted down the address, upon which her eyes had been longingly lingering, and put it into her pocket.

"At all events there can be no harm in trying," thought Miss Laurella.—"There are periods in a woman's life in which she must boldly take the helm of fate into her own hands."

Her toilette, this morning, was prolonged and fastidious; the wintry little curls were studiously and carefully brushed repeatedly round the stick, and the blue-ribbon bow was adjusted jauntily at her throat; while the powder puff, dabbed again and again over her brow and cheeks, vainly strove to stimulate the lily-bloom of youth. A black silk dress, and a round hat of black plush, with a knot of red and brown autumn leaves upon it, completed her preparations for the hand-to-hand conflict with Destiny, in which she was about to engage. For Miss Laurella Wintergreen had had enough of half measures. It was high time, she told herself, to be up and doing.

Nevertheless her heart throbbed with strangulating rapidity when she stood at the door of No. — Birch st., the address written down in her memorandum book.

"It's such a very embarrassing thing to do," she thought. "But then, if the gentleman has advertised, he can't be surprised if his appeal is answered."

A tall, well-looking servant man answered the bell. Miss Wintergreen congratulated herself that her future fate was rich, at any event, and in reply to the man's inquiring look, answered;

"I have come in reference to the—the advertisement in this morning's paper."

"Oh, the advertisement—yes'm," answered the man, as coolly as if advertisements were an every day affair in that household. "Please to walk in, mem."

And Miss Wintergreen, passing through an elegantly carpeted hall, found herself in a good-sized room beyond, where four or five other women were seated.

And such a motley crew! Laurella, glancing up through her vail, took a sort of mental stock of them at one look. A starched female in the corner, in rusty bombazine and a widow's cap, with the corners of her mouth drawn down in a half circle, sat contemplating her folded hands; a plump Irish woman in a gay delaine dress and very dirty gloves, was warming her substantial feet at the fender; two young women, who looked as if they might be "out on leave" from a factory, giggled at the window; and a hard faced woman in black sat on the sofa, with two red-headed little boys on either side of her.

And these, thought Miss Laurella, with a contemptuous elevation of her nose, are my rivals.

"Take a cheer, Miss," said the man. "My master'll see you d'rectly."

"There is no hurry, my good man," said Miss Wintergreen, majestically.

Almost in the same breath the door beyond opened, and a fat old lady in a false front and spectacles, waddled out, breathing very hard, and wearing a flushed, indignant expression.

"He thinks I'm too old!" quoth this matron, looking round upon the assembled group. "I'd just like to know how old he is hisself, that I would! I never see nothin' like the airs some people puts on!"

And she went puffing out, like the Great Eastern, in a state of discomfiture.

"Now, then, mum," said the young man, beckoning to the lady of the bombazine and widow's cap, "if you'll please to walk in—"

The next minute the starched female had disappeared behind the panels of the door, which she opened and closed as cautiously as if it were the valve of some powerful steam engine. Miss Laurella pondered on the deliberate system which seemed to characterize the movements of the Great Unknown.

"It is very queer," she thought, "and yet there's something grand about it, too."

Meanwhile the factory girls giggled on, the Irishwoman warmed her feet, and the mother of the red-headed urchins administered tweaked ears and peppermint drops with laudable impartiality.

There was a general stir among them when the widow came mincing out from her audience in the presence-chamber.

"Well, an' what luck did yez have?" inquired the Celtic female, speaking boldly the question the others longed to ask, but dared not.

"This world is not governed by luck," sourly answered the widow, compressing her lips; "and I am thankful that my lot is not to be cast in with one who objects to daily services and a cold dinner on Sunday. Ah, me! I don't know what our wicked nation is coming to. My umbrella, please, young man."

So departed the widow in the odor of sanctity, and the mother of the red-headed boys was next ushered into the presence of the mysterious advertiser.

She had, however, been absent but a moment before she came bolting out, her flounces rustling stiffly, and her eyes blazing with wrath.

"A man who objects to two dear little boys as is like lambs about the house, an't no better than Herod!" she exclaimed. "Come, Adolphus and Algernon—come, my poor little angels, we'll go where we can be made welcome."

"An't we goin' to live here, mar?" demanded the elder one, whiningly.

"No, my poppet; we wouldn't demean ourselves to them as an't worthy of our notice. Come, darlings!" And away went the boys at a dog-trot, with their mother bristling after, and scolding all the way to the street door.

Miss Laurella's heart began to beat with renewed apprehensions.

"He's very hard to suit," she thought "I wonder if I shall please him?"

"May be, Miss, you'd better go in next," said the young man looking rather dubiously at the two factory girls and the red-faced daughter of Erin.

Miss Wintergreen rose up, giving her dress a shake, and instinctively feeling to see if the scanty curls hung right, and followed her guide into a handsome apartment, where a Liverpool coal fire burned on the marble hearth, and an array of books proclaimed a literary taste on the part of its occupant. Glancing timidly up, she saw a fine looking gentleman of about forty standing by the mantlepiece.

"Sit down, ma'am," he said, motioning her to a chair; and then, turning to his servant, he asked in a whisper:

"How many more of them are there, Patrick?"

"Only three of them, sir, barrin' this one."

"Three more!" he ejaculated, as if unconsciously. "I shall go crazy!—I'll have to get married in self-defence.

"I tould yer honor that was the best way, all along," said Patrick, giving the fire an energetic poke, as he withdrew.

'Well, ma'am," said the gentleman, turning abruptly to Miss Wintergreen, "I suppose you want just what the rest do—an easy place, and nothing to do!"

Miss Laurella, rather taken by surprise at this unexpected speech, knew not what to say, so very sensibly said nothing.

"Are you a good cook?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," faltered our heroine.

"Understand the care of a house?"

"Yes, sir,"

"References."

"The very best, sir." Miss Wintergreen bridled here.

"How much do you expect a month.

"How much do I expect, sir?"

"Yes; what have you been having?"

"My means, sir, heretofore, have been limited, but—"

"But that's not the question," he interrupted sharply. "What do you expect from me?"

"As—as pin-money, sir?"

"No—as wages!"

Miss Wintergreen drooped her eyelashes.

"Pray, sir, do not deem me so mercenary!"

"Then what the deuce are you here for?" abruptly demanded her interlocutor. "I want a housekeeper, and I'm willing to pay her good wages, but I don't like all this boating about the bush."

"Yes, sir; but a wife—"

"Who's talking about a wife?" he shouted.

"Are not you? Did not you advertise for a wife?" breathlessly questioned Miss Laurella.

"No, I didn't! Do I look like a candidate for Bedlam?"

Miss Wintergreen fumbled faintly for the memorandum-book in her pocket.

"Isn't this No. — Birch street?—Didn't you—"

The gentleman snatched a newspaper from the table, and pointed to a paragraph in its columns.

"There is my advertisement. For a housekeeper."

And Miss Wintergreen saw, to her dismay, that she had penciled down the wrong address.

"I'm sorry for your disappointment' said the gentleman, with a grim smile, "but you may stay and keep house for me at sixteen dollars a month, if you like. You look neat and tidy, and—"

But, with a look of ineffable disdain, Miss Wintergreen swept out of the room. A housekeeper, at sixteen dollars a month!—to dare talk thus to her, who had dreamed of orange blossoms and bridal white.

Miss Wintergreen never answered another advertisement, and she is still Miss Wintergreen.

A Story of Fifty-two Prayer Meetings

"To be sure," said I to myself, one year ago the last week in December, "to be sure, this is the evening of our Church prayer meeting, but as I have not been there much this year, it is scarcely worth while to begin now.—I'll just wait until next week, and then begin the year right, and go all the time.

Well, it so happened that the first evening of the year fell upon the evening of the regular prayer-meeting, and there was none. Of course, although I wanted to go, I couldn't. The next week my neighbor and particular friend, Mrs. Lamb, gave a party. Now Mrs. Lamb is a member of our church, and most undeniably did wrong; but then she is a very dear friend of mine, and I can go to prayer-meeting every week of the year, but it is not every week I can accept an invitation from Mrs. Lamb: therefore, sorry as I was, I felt that I must go to the party. The next week Miss Kellogg was here.—Now, I work pretty hard, and am fond of music, and I need some entertainment, and I really felt it my duty to go there, for Miss Kellogg does not sing every week. You see I was at least excusable. The next week it snowed; the next it rained; the next it was terribly cold, and the next it was warm and thawing, and so wet under foot. The next week Gough lectured, and as I can go to prayer-meeting every week, I thought I might just for once go to hear Mr. Gough.—The next week I had a headache; the next a dress-maker; and the next, which was the twelfth, a very hard cold. So you see I could not go any the first quarter. The following week it was very dark, and I had no company. The fourteenth I was going, but just as I was about to start I heard that our "beloved pastor" was away, and that Deacon Quickset would lead the meeting. Now I don't like Deacon Quickset. He was so unkind as to say, upon one occasion, that he believed that if I would make an effort I might get out to prayer-meeting; as if I were not constantly making an effort; and he ought to know that I always go when it is at all consistent.—He had better remember that "charity covereth a multitude of sins." I am sometimes obliged to be absent from prayer meeting, but I do not talk about my neighbors. As Deacon Q. was going to lead the meeting, I don't feel it my duty to go. The next week, I will confess, I forgot it until it was too late. The next week I started, but was so vexed to find that my time was too slow, and I was again late. The sixteenth I did not feel at all well, and the next I went to visit a sick friend. You know it is as much our duty to visit the sick as it is to attend meetings. The next week, unfortunately, there was a wedding in one of the other churches, to which I received an admission card, and I could go to prayer-meeting every week, and particularly as the bride's dress was to be very elegant,—the trail at least four yards long,—I just thought I would go to the wedding.—The next week I was very tired; it was our house-cleaning, and Bridget took it into her head to take this time of all others to get the ague; and then the week after that it was to warm to wear my hood and my new hat was not trimmed. For the next two months I was out of town, and I never enjoy going to social meetings where I am a stranger, and so I did not think it best to go. The first two weeks after I returned from my summer tour I was altogether too tired.—One's health is of the first importance. The next Wednesday, which was the thirty-fourth of the year, was a happy day for me. Nothing interfered with my regular established plans, and I went to the prayer meeting. How pleasant it was! I really think Mrs. Lamb ought to make an effort to go. I mean to speak to her about it. The thirty-fifth week my poor cousin wished me to stay at home with her; she was disappointed about going out herself, and she said as I went out last week she really thought I might. As I did not wish to seem ill natured, of course I could not refuse; do you think I could? The next week there was a heavy thunder storm, and I am afraid to go out when it lightens. The thirty-seventh, thunder again. I often wonder that Providence should interfere in this way with what really seems to be our duty. The thirty-eighth it was excessively warm, and the thirty-ninth was the only evening in the week when my regular dressmaker could fit my dress. The fortieth week there was to be a Bible agent, or something of that sort, and I hate agents. The forty-first there was a festival in another church, and as I am not a sectarian at all, and think it our duty to help one another, I thought I ought to be there. The next week I staid at home to write to my dear mother, I went riding the night before, and had an invitation to the theatre the next night, and so was obliged to take this night for my letter, though I was sorry. The following week I was obliged to stay at home to finish a tatting tidy I was making for the orphan fair. Surely the orphans must not be neglected; and the next week I was at the fair.—I should have gone to meeting, but they had put me upon a committee, quite against my wish; and the next week I was suffering from a severe cold, which I had contracted while working for the orphan fair. The forty-sixth I was rather obliged to go to another party, though I am principled against such things generally.—But if people will give parties on such nights, what can a person do? The forty-seventh, most unluckily, occurred upon the evening of my birthday. I could not help that, of course, and a person's birthday only comes once a year, and you can go to a prayer-meeting any time. So we thought it only right to be social, and we invited a few particular friends. One gets dropped out of society very soon if their invitations are not returned, and I have often heard ministers say that our social duties are quite as binding as our religious ones, or at least something to that effect. The next week I started, but at the gate I met my dear young friend, who was getting ready to be married, and she was so anxious I should go with her, to give some orders respecting her wedding hat, that I could not refuse, particularly when she said she would trust no one's taste and judgment but mine. Besides, as she will only be married once, (at least not unless John should die), and I suppose it was my duty to go with her. The two following weeks I was just as busy as I could be, for we had decided to have a Christmas tree, and I was getting ready for it. I fully resolved to go after Christmas.—Well, the last week of the year had gone. I was tired and blue, and did not feel like going out, and it did seem to me that I had better wait for the New Year again, and then go all the time. But you see I really intended to do so this year; and Mrs. Lamb says she heard our minister say that God would give us credit for our really good intentions, and that is a great comfort, I am sure, and much more charitable and sensible than that other really profane remark, which I have heard vulgar people quote from some old-fashioned fellow, that "the way to hell is paved with good intentions."—Packard's Monthly.

SLATE PENCILS.— Twenty years ago, all the slate pencils used were manufactured in Germany. She then supplied America with this commodity. In 1850, there was a young man living in West Rutland, Vt., eighteen years of age, who fortunately discovered a supply of stone for making a first-class article of slate pencils. He began by whittling out the pencils and selling them to school children. Being a better article than for sale in the stores, he found a ready sale for all he could whittle out. He become possessed of the idea that there was a fortune in the business, and his dream has been realized. This quarry of slate pencil stone was situated in a large ravine, four miles north of Castleton, Vt., near Bemoseen Lake. The land on which it is situated was for sale at $100. He purchased it and began operations by sawing out the pencils and whittling them round. The business of making them grew immensely on his hands so that it was impossible to keep a clean order book. Machinery was invented to facilitate the process, which reached something like perfection, and enormously increased the production of pencils. At present the quarry and mills are owned by a joint stock company. They are valued at $300,000. From fifty to one hundred thousand pencils are turned out daily, and upwards of a hundred hands are employed in the quarry and in the mill.

Recipes.

FURNITURE POLISH.—Take two ounces of beeswax, cut fine; spirits of turpentine, one ounce: one drachm of powdered rosin; melt at a gentle heat, and add two drachms of Indian red to give it a mahogany color.

REPOLISHING FURNITURE.—Oiled furniture that has been scratched or marred may be restored to its original beauty simply by rubbing boiled linseed oil, used by painters, on the surface, with a wad of woolen rags. Varnished furniture, dulled, may be similarly restored by the use of a varnish composed of shellac dissolved in alcohol, applied in a similar manner. Common beeswax rubbed over furniture and heated by the friction of a woolen wad briskly used, is also an excellent furniture polish.

NAIL IN THE FOOT.—To relieve from the terrible effects of running a nail in the foot of man or horse, take peach leaves, bruise them, apply to the wound, and confine with a bandage.—They cure as if by magic. Renew the application twice a day, if necessary, but one application usually does the work. I have cured both man and horse in a few hours, when they were apparently on the point of having the lock-jaw. This recipe, remembered and practiced, will save many valuable lives.

BUGS ON VINES.—At this time of year there are many inquiries for the best method of keeping bugs from melon and other vines. The safest and surest remedy found is fresh charcoal, pulverized. Dust it on the hill when you put the seed in, and as soon as the plants are up, dust them plentifully.—If washed off by rains, repeat the operation. Thus treated, the plants are perfectly safe. We have seen, says the writer, all bugs disappear at once on the application, when the plants are almost covered with them. There is no fear of injuring vegetation by the use of charcoal.

HOW MARBLES ARE MADE.—The chief place of the manufacture of "marbles," those little pieces of stone which contribute so largely to the enjoyment of "young America," is at Oberstein, on the Nahe, in Germany, where there are large agate mills and quarries, the refuse of which is carfully turned to good paying account, by being made into the small balls employed by experts to knuckle with, which are mostly sent to the American market. The substance used in Saxony is a hard calcarious stone, which is first broken into blocks, nearly square, by blows with a hammer. These are thrown by the one hundred or two hundred in a sort of mill, which is formed of a flat, stationary slab of stone, with a number of concentric furrows upon his face, a block of oak, or other hard wood, of the same diametrice size, is placed over the stones and partly resting upon them. The small block of wood is kept revolving while water flows upon the stone slab. In about fifteen minutes the stones are turned to spheres, and then, being fit for sale, are henceforth called "marbles." One establishment, containing only three of these mills, will turn out fully sixty thousand "marbles" at Oberstein by first clipping the pieces neatly round with a hammer, handled by a skillful workman, and then wearing down the edges on a grindstone.

STOOP A LITTLE.—The following story related by Dr. Franklin, in a letter to Dr. Mather, has been often told, and is well worth telling again;

"The last time I saw your father," saps Dr. Franklin, "was in 1724. In taking my leave, he showed me a short way out of the house, through a narrow passage, which was crossed by a beam overhead. We were still talking as I withdrew, he accompanying me behind, and as I turned toward him, he said, 'Stoop! stoop!' I did not understand him till I felt my head hit against the beam. He was a man who never missed an occasion of giving instruction; and upon this, he said to me, 'you are young and have the world before you; stoop a little, as you go through it, and you will avoid many hard thumps!' This advice thus beat into my head, has frequently been of use to me; and I often think of it when I see pride mortified and misfortune brought upon people by carrying their head too high."

On the day following the receipt of the news of the Richmond disaster, a sharp thief at Lexington, Ky., while on his trial, gave word that the court-house was falling, and, during the confusion, made good his escape.

Miss Sallie Joy appeared as a reporter at the recent suffrage meeting at Dayton, Ohio, and a jealous brother in the profession meanly wrote of her that whether she is a "thing of beauty" or not she will probably remain a "Joy forever."

THE new Constitution of Illinois will be submitted to a vote of the people on the first Saturday of July.

GEN. KILPATRICK, it is said, has resigned his position as minister to Chilli and will return shortly to this country.

THE 'Kansas Farmer' published at Fort Leavenworth, says that the fruit crop in that section promises to be unusually abundant this year.

HON. GEO. W. WOODWARD has informed the Democrats of Pennsylvania Twelfth District that he will not accept a renomination for Congress.

DURING the first of the present month the public debt was reduced at the rate of nearly half a million per day. Who says that Grant's administration is a failure?

THE arrangements for taking the Census of 1870 are said to be more thorough and promise to give more satisfactory results than in the case of any previous Census.

"NEVER despair" is now the motto of the lady advocates of woman suffrage. That's a very good motto, but we think if the granting of that privilege would never dis-pair a loving couple, their motto would be more appriate.

THE case of Dr. Schoeppe came before the Supreme Court the other week. The Commonwealth's counsel contend that Schoppe's case is not within the new law, it having been passed after the other was disposed of. The question will be argued on the 24th.

THE proceedings of the McFarland trial are now being scattered in pamphlet form broadcast over the land.—What a pity the last chapter contains an example of New York generous juryism by which men who may act as did McFarland can feel a sense of security against human punishment?

MR. WM. J. SWAIN's new paper, the Public Record, made its appearance in Philadelphia, on Saturday morning. It is a penny paper, and a fac simile of the Ledger, in type and "make-up," though it is smaller. It is well filled with advertisements, and gives promises of complete success.

THE receipts of the American Bible Society were larger last year than any year before, amounting to $747,058,69. Of these, $432,781 65 were derived from sales; $161,465 78 from donations; $116,935 35 from legacies, and $35,818 91 from rents of stores and offices in the Bible House.

ERIE county has four daily, six weekly, and ten German papers, advocating Republican principles, and only one Democratic paper. We infer that the Republican party in that county is split up into very many factions; but notwithstanding it rolls up 3500 or more for the Republican ticket.

AMONG the most recent discoveries made by Gen. Belknap, Secretary of War, is that there are no less that 15,000 mules in the supposed service of Quartermaster's Department, most of whom are engaged in the business of "eating their heads off." The Quartermaster General protested that all of this army of the long-eared was required for present or expected duty, but General Belknap failed to see it, and will forthwith order the sale of five thousand of Gen. Meig's pets.

NEW YORK ELECTION.—The State of New York held an election on Tuesday for a Chief Justice and four Associate Justices of the Court of Appeals, or what we in Pennsylvania would call the Supreme Court. The returns indicate the success of the Democratic candidates by 75,000 majority. New York City elected municipal officers, the Tammany candidates being probably all chosen. New York city gives a Democratic majority reported at 60,000. The colored citizens voted without molestation. The vote was heavy in the city but very light in all the country districts, and no wonder. The New York Republicans have come to feel that their going to the polls, for large as their majorities may be in the country districts, it is always sure to be over-balanced by the fraudulent votes of the Democrats in the City of New York.

An order of the Commissioner of Pensions, requiring an attorney to refune an excess over the legal fee of ten dollars for prosecuting a pension claim, has been sustained by the Secretary of the Interior.

☞It was a bad stroke of policy for the Republican party by men who had been honored by the party to attempt to reform it in this county last year by the election of Democrats.—It was an unfortunate stroke of policy for the party of the whole district, for we now hear of the disease having spread into Cambria county, the home of our Congressman, who has been influenced during the past year to recognize in this county, to too great an extent, such of the party as were willing to aid in the defeat of Republican nominees. Take the "situation" as it is—and it is just as the Democrats would have it—and just as the leading disorganizers made it last fall, and they have nursed it ever since.—The Republican party can be successful in the district if the would-be leaders will work as earnestly for the success of the party as they do for themselves. We are willing to work only for the success of the party, and until nominations are made we will feel it our duty to give the "situation" truthfully so that the party may make nominations understandingly.

☞The new political organization of working-men appears to be giving Mr. Cremer immense trouble. He thinks the Republicans in it honest in their convictions, and that they will not knowingly unite in any movement intended to result in a Democratic victory. If they should unite in any movement to bring about a Democratic victory their conduct as Republicans would be the same as the conduct of Mr. Cremer and his friends last year. We do not believe in going out of the party to reform it—we have had some experience in that—and we hope all our party friends will stand fast within the lines of the party and work that their opinions may be heard and felt by the party leaders who have misrepresented them.

STOPPING THE FURNACES.—At the meeting of the iron-masters held at Columbia, Lancaster county, last week, the unanimous feeling of those present was to stop the production of pig iron, which cannot be made at current rates without loss, and the probability is that within the next sixty days nearly if not all the furnaces in that vicinity will be idle. Nor is this feeling confined to the iron-masters of Columbia. It extends all over the country. What with the difficulty of procuring coal and the fact that iron cannot be manufactured just now at a profit, there is a reason to fear that the stoppage of furnaces will soon become general throughout the State, especially if the present duty on foreign pig iron is reduced as proposed in the bill before Congress.

☞It would be well for the Republican party if Congress would adjourn and Senators and Representatives go home to learn the sentiments of their constituents. The elections everywhere indicate falling off from the Republican party. The masses are getting tired of being governed by dishonest and unprincipled politicians who never consult or respect public opinion. If the Republican party should be defeated next fall in the election of Congressmen and other officers, the fault will be with the leaders in Congress and other high places.

☞And now a new snake story is added to the list. A lady was recently out walking, accompanied by her nurse and two children, near St. Louis, when one of the latter was missed for a few moments. On being called, he answered from a little distance:—"Here I am, mamma, behind the stump; I'm playing with a big, nice worm. I've got a chip, and it opens its mouth over so wide when I touch its teeth with the chip." Anxious to see the character of the child's playmate, the two women went to the spot, when, behold, they saw a rattlesnake two feet long coiled against the butt of the stump, and the child thrusting the chip against its head. The snake appeared perfectly passive, not even giving the usual warning with its rattles. It is needless, perhaps, to say that the mother was frightened beyond the power of motion. The nurse quickly removed the child, and one of the hands despatched the dangerous playmate.

The Mobile Tribune relates that when General Joe Johnston made his first visit into Maryland after the surrender, he was accosted by an excited individual, who pitched into Congress generally, and exclaimed: "General, this thing will not do: it must be stopped; they will find the war is not over—I am not whipped!" Here General Johnston interposed with the query, "In which army did you serve?" With undue haste and some confusion, the irate individual began a long explanation of the causes which kept him out of actual service, when he was interrupted by the General with, "Never mind your reasons, sir; I see you are right; you are not whipped!"

THE LUMBER TRADE.—It is said that two hundred rafts have been put into the Susquehanna and its tributaries this season against eighteen hundred last season. Computing each raft at twelve hundred dollars (which is about their average worth), the aggregate value of the whole number is two million six hundred and forty thousand dollars. From this some idea may be formed of the immense forests in the northern part of the State and the extent of the lumber trade.

A Wonderful Performance.

In Cincinnati, on Monday, two brothers named Rodiguez, Spaniards, as their names indicate, came to Father Edward Purcell and asked leave to put in order the lightning rod that runs up the tall spire of the cathedral on the corner of Plum and Eighth streets. The Father told them the insulators on the rod were broken and other repairs to it, no one could tell how much, were needed, but he besought them to put up scaffolding in order to get at the rod, which needed to be repaired. Having been commissioned to do the work they proceeded to the execution of it without delay. To the passers along the thoroughfares the sight of two men threading their way up the outside of the spire was full of interest. Coming out of the spire at one of the Louvre windows just above the dial faces of the tower, the men swung a ladder partly by a rope dropped down from a narrow aperture just below the base of the spire, and partly by its own hooks, caught upon the stone molding around the next story above the tower. Up this pendulous ladder one of the men clambered, hanging to the rungs like a parrot to its perch. On the ledge of the molding, to which the hooks of the ladder hung, was a good base of operations. A half dozen ladders were provided. One was drawn up and planted on the new base, and lashed in place both at the top and the bottom. The top touched the last ledge of molding in the ascent of the base out of which the tower arose.

On the streets for squares distant witnesses watched the ascent, while near the scene the pavements were lined with spectators. The two brothers were on the scene by this time and the ascent up the spire proper had been commenced. The first ladder of this final series rested on the base of the spire and was lashed to it top and the bottom, by ropes passing around the spire. The two men carried a second ladder up this one, and lashed the bottom of the former to the top of the latter. The next thing was to secure this last addition of climbing apparatus. One of the brothers climbed it while the other held its base. Up in that dizzy hight a rope was thrown around the spire, and the top of this ladder secured by it, until five or six ladders were strung in the series, the topmost reaching within two or three feet of the base of the cross, which terminates the spire at a hight of two hundred and twenty-two feet above the base of the Cathedral.

When the line of spliced ladders had crept up the eastern face of the spire to this position, a ladder with hooks at the top was carried up and hooked upon the cross. One of the brothers ascended this, took position first upon an arm of the cross, and then stepped up and stood erect upon the very tiptop of the upright portion of that stone cross. Standing there he unscrewed the top of the lightning rod and tossed it to the ground. Several variations of the performance took place about this time. Once both the brothers were on the opposite arms of the cross. The standing upon the top of the cross, and the climbing about its arms continued for some time, when the men descended, leaving their ladder for a continuation of the performance the next day.

The crowd cheered when the top of the cross was reached, that is the boys in the crowd cheered. The men were sober observers. One strong fellow turned from the sight with the remark that it was too much for his nerves. Others shuddered audibly, and wished aloud for the men to come down, but still they continued to look. Everybody expressed relief when the two men came down, and many gave vent to regrets that the perilous task would be continued on Tuesday.

The Odd Fellows.

The annual session of the Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Pennsylvania convened Tuesday morning, at the hall on Nth. Sixth street, Philadelphia. Grand Master Samuel F. Gwinner was in the chair. The representatives and new members were received. The reports of the Grand Master and the Grand Secretary were read and referred to the appropriate committees.

The report of the Secretary shows the following as the state of the Order during the year ending March 31, '70:

It is stated that there are more Israelites in New York city than in the Holy Land, or in all Syria. They are about seventy thousand in that city, and this is probably a larger number than now inhabit the Scripture lands above mentioned. Of that seventy thousand there are not one thousand that can justly be called poor, while the majority are heavy owners of real estate, and also the most active and enterprising of the commercial people.

Three Thousand Hogs Roasted Alive

The stock-pens of Gaff's distillery, in Cincinnati, containing 4,200 hogs, were burned on Wednesday morning. Three thousand hogs were roasted to death. The scene is said to have been as grand as it was horrible. Great volumes of flame, fed by the living fuel, shot upward thousands of feet and rolled off in dense masses of black smoke. The outcry of the frightened animals, as they crowded one above into the corners of the pens remotest from the fire, until its rapid approach first scorched and then consumed them, awed the spectators, who stood looking helplessly on. Every effort was made to save at least a portion of the hogs, the greater proportion being cut of off. But a little over a 1,000 of the animals were gotten out in all, and the rest of the 4,200 were literally broiled alive. The odor of burned or roast pork pervaded the city for many blocks in all directions after the fire died out for want of fuel. The loss on live stock alone is estimated at $60,000. The loss on the buildings is estimated at from $25,000 to $35,000.

The weather telegraphs of Europe now predict the condition of the weather from England to Sicily for many hours beforehand, with perfect regularity. The losses thus averted may be calculated at a high figure. The Paris and London papers publish the telegrams as carefully as they do the fluctuations on 'Change.

M., commencing on third Tuesday of June next, and that the loans be sold on the evening of the same day.

On motion, the Chair appointed P. M. Lytle, R. A. Orbison and J. C. Blair a committee to ascertain what books are necessary for the use of the association, and where, and at what price the same can be purchased.

On motion of Mr. Crites, adjoured, to meet at the office of the Secretary, on Thursday evening, 26th instant, at 8½ o'clock.

P. M. Lytle, Secretary.

Extension of the H. & B. T. R R—Chief Engineer Fulton writes us that he has completed the survey and field work on the route of the proposed extension of the Broad Top Road and will be ready to furnish an estimate of the cost in a few days. It is believed that Mr. Fulton has obtained the best, safest and most economical route yet presented, with the most moderate grades, none of which exceed thirty-six feet per mile. It is proposed to cross the river at Mt. Dallas, and thence along the South side to near Bedford, where the river will be again crossed, and thence to a point on the Hollidaysburg pike at the beginning of Richard street, in Bedford. The bridge at Mt. Dallas is located with a view to subsequently projecting a branch road to the mouth of Black Valley.—Bloody Run Press.

☞ Monday next is decoration day. We are pleased to note that some preparations are being made by the Grand Army of the Republic of this place, to observe the National Memorial Day. We should always hold in remembrance the deeds of the patriots who now sleep beneath the sod, and nothing is more appropriate than gathering around their graves in spring time and strewing them with flowers. It is a custom that should never grow old, as every year there is another soldier mustered on the roll of the departed, and since the last decoration day, several of the "brave boys" have departed, and two but recently under very sad circumstances. Let us gather, then, to the Cemetery, on Monday next, and observe the day in thoughts of those whom we should ever delight to honor.

A Shame.—We doubt whether there is one citizen in our midst who did not feel a tinge of shame on learning that there was a very meagre attendance at the lecture of Rev. J. D. Brown on India, on Friday evening last. We think it showed very bad treatment to one who left our town to endure the perils of mission life; but we sincerely hope Mr. B. will afford us another opportunity of hearing his lecture, and we hope our citizens will lay aside for once at least their repugnance and prejudice to lectures and give him a large audience. A missionary who went from our own midst is certainly worthy to be heard; nor would we like to have it to say that a missionary is without honor in his own country.

☞ Just what is needed in this place—a Drug store kept by a practical physician. Doctor Johnston has opened a Drug Store in the brick building opposite the Exchange Hotel in this place. The doctor has been a practicing physician for over forty years, and people can rely upon getting pure drugs and medicines at the lowest prices. Advice will be given free when medicines are wanted; will also attend to calls. 1t

Lost.—In this borough, near the Court House, one day last week, a small black silk [beaded] Parasol.—The finder will be amply rewarded by leaving it at this office.

Wanted.—10,000 pounds tub washed wool, for which we will pay the highest market price. Henry & Co

Child Lost.—On Wednesday, the 4th inst., a little child of Stephen G. Wright of Broad-top township, about two and a-half years of age, was lost in the mountains between Wells Valley and the Village of Coaldale, and wandered about for twenty-one hours before it was found. It appears that Mr. Wright was working near Coaldale, about a mile and a half from home, and had taken two of the older children with him in the morning, intending to send them back with a package for their mother. Being gone longer than usual, the mother became anxious about them, and started out to meet them, leaving the little child above mentioned and an older one in charge of the house. She was hardly out of sight, when these two youngsters started after her and had gone some distance from the house when the older one concluded to go back, leaving the other alone in the road. In due time the mother returned with the boys and found her youngest child missing. Upon inquiry, she learned the above particulars, and immediately instituted a search, which diligently kept up till five o'clock in the afternoon.—Every nook and corner was examined, but no trace of the child could be found. At this time a message was sent to the father and the news communicated to Coaldale. The good citizens of that town, merchants, mechanics, miners, laborers, and all, joined in the hunt, traveling the country far and wide until midnight when they adjourned only to re-form the line early in the morning. The next morning Mr. B. F. Thomas, while on his way home for refreshments, found the child sitting by the trunk of a fallen tree, about one mile from where the parents live, calling for its mother. He accordingly picked it up and carried it to its mother. We leave our readers to imagine the joy occasioned by this intelligence. The child appears to be none the worse for this bit of romance, notwithstanding it had the whooping cough at the time, and was exposed to very inclement weather.—Bedford Inquirer.

Union Prayer Meeting.—A Union Prayer Meeting, inaugurated by the Young Men's Christian Association, was held in the basement of the M. E. Church of this place on Tuesday evening last. The object of these meetings is to bring about a more united and harmonious effort on the part of the Christian denominations in our midst, and it is hoped and expected that the public generally will attend them.

The next meeting will be held this Tuesday evening in the basement of the Presbyterian church. All invited.

Fire.—The dwelling house of John Johnson on the Port farm in West township, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday night last. The most of the furniture, etc., was destroyed.

—The roof of the Jackson House in this place was discovered to be on fire on Thursday afternoon last, having been ignited by sparks from a locomotive. The flames were extinguished before much damage was done. When will we see slate roofs on the houses on Railroad street?

ADDRESS

TO THE

NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED.

WHOSE SUFFERINGS HAVE BEEN PROTRACTED

FROM HIDDEN CAUSES, AND WHOSE

CASES REQUIRE

PROMPT TREATMENT.

TO RENDER EXISTENCE DESIRABLE

If you are suffering, or have suffered, from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urine organs, or your kidneys, get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky or flocky, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick skum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling on this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you restless nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business men are always those whose organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. These will not only ruin their constitution, but those they do business with or for.

How many men, from badly cured diseases, from the effects of self abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in these organs that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease—idiocy, lunacy, paralysis, spinal affections, suicide, and almost every form of disease humanity is heir to—and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever suspected, and have doctored for all but the right one.

ROSADALIS

THE Great American Health Restorer, purifies the blood and cures Scrofula, Syphilis, Skin Diseases, Rheumatism, Diseases of Women and all Chronic Affections of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. Recommended by the Medical Faculty and thousand of our best citizens.

Read the testimony of Physicians and patients who have used Rosadalis send for our Rosadalis Guide to Health or Almanac for this year, which we publish for gratuitous distribution; it will give you much valuable information.

Dr. R. W. Carr, of Baltimore says:

I take pleasure in recommending your Rosadalis as a very powerful alterative. I have seen it used in two cases with happy results—one in a case of secondary syphilis, in which the patient pronounced himself cured after having taken five bottles of your medicine. The other is a case of scrofula of long standing, which is rapidly improving under its use, and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the formula by which your Rosadalis is made, and find it an excellent compound of all alterative ingredients.

Dr. Sparks, of Nicholasville, Ky., says he has used Rosadalis in cases of scrofula and secondary Syphilis with satisfactory results—as a cleaner of the blood I know no better remedy.

Samuel G. McFadden, Murfreesboro', Tennessee, says:

I have used seven bottles of Rosadalis, and am entirely cured of Rheumatism; send me four bottles, as I wish it for my brother, who has scrofulous sore eyes.

Benjamin Bechtol, of Lima, Ohio, writes, I have suffered for twenty years with an inveterate eruption over my body; a short time since I purchased a bottle of Rosadalis and it effected a perfect cure.

Rosadalis is sold by John Read and S. S. Smith, Huntingdon, Pa., and Druggists generally.

WHAT I KNOW OF FARMING.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

XVI.

THOROUGH TILLAGE.

My little, hilly, rocky farm teaches lessons of thoroughness which I would gladly impart to the boys of to-day who are destined to be the farmers of the last quarter of this century. I am sure they will find profit in farming better than their grandfathers did, and especially in putting their land into the best possible condition for effective tillage. There were stones in my fields varying in size from that of a brass kettle up to that of a hay-cock—some of them raising their heads above the surface, others burrowing just below it—which had been plowed around and over, perhaps a hundred times, till I went at them with team and bar, or (where necessary) with drill and blast, turned or blew them out, and hauled them away, so that they will interfere with cultivation nevermore. I insist that this a profitable operation—that a field which will not pay for such clearing should be planted with trees and thrown out of cultivation conclusively. Dodging and skulking from rock to rock is hard upon team, plow, and plowman, and it can rarely pay. Land ribbed and spotted with fast rocks will pay if judiciously planted with timber—possibly if well set in Fruit—but tilling it from year to year is a thankless task, and its owner may better work by the day for his neighbors than try to make his bread by such tillage.

So with fields soaked by springs or sodden with stagnant water. If you say you cannot afford to drain your wet land, I respond that you can still less afford to till it without draining. If you really cannot afford to fit it for cultivation, your next best cause is to let it severely alone.

A poor man who has a rough, rugged, sterile farm, which he is unable to bring to its best possible condition at once, yet which he clings to and must live from, should resolve that, if life and health be spared him, he will reclaim one field each year until all that is not devoted to timber shall have been brought into high condition.—When his Summer harvest is over, and his Fall crops have receieved their last cultivation, there will generally be one or two Autumn months which he can devote mainly to his work. Let him take hold of it with resolute purpose to improve every available hour, not by running over the largest possible area, but by dealing with one field so thoroughly that it will need no more during a long lifetime. If it has stone that the plow will reach, dig them out; if it needs draining, drain it so thoroughly that it may hereafter be plowed in Spring, so soon as the frost leaves it; and now let soil and subsoil be so loosened and pulverized that roots may freely penetrate them to a depth of fifteen to twenty inches, finding nourishment all the way, with incitement to go further if ever failing moisture shall render this necessary. Drouth habitually shortens our Fall crops from ten to fifty per cent. It is sure to injure us more gravely as our forests are swept away by axe and fire; and, while much may be done to mitigate its ravages by enriching the soil so as to give your crops an early start, and a rank, luxuriant growth, the farmer's chief reliance must still be a depth of soil adequate to withstand weeks of the fiercest sunshine.

I have considered what is urged as to the choice of roots to run just beneath the surface, and it does not signify. Roots seek at once heat and moisture; if the moisture awaits them close to the surface, of course they mainly run there, because the heat is the greatest. If moisture fails there, they must descend to seek it even at the cost of finding the heat inadequate—though heat increases and descends under the furvid suns which rob the surface of moisture. Make the soil rich and mellow ever so far down, and you need not fear that the roots will descend an inch lower than they should. They understand their business; it is your sagacity that may possibly prove deficient.

I suspect that the average farmer does far too little plowing—by which I mean, not that he plows too few acres, for he often plows too many, but that he should plow oftener as well as deeper and more thoroughly. I spent three or four of my boyish Summers planting and tilling Corn and Potatoes on fields broken up just before they were planted, never cross-plowed, and of course tough and intractable throughout the season. The yield of Corn was middling, considering the season; that of Potatoes more than middling; yet, if those fields had been well plowed in the previous Autumn, cross-plowed early in the Spring, and thoroughly harrowed just before planting-time, I am confident that the yield would have been far greater, and the labor (save in harvesting) rather less—the cost of the Fall plowing being overbalanced by the saving of half the time necessarily given to the planting and hoeing.

Fall Plowing has this recommendation—it lightens labor at the busier season, by transferring it to one of comparative dullness. I may have said that I consider him a good farmer who knows how to make a rainy day equally effective with one that is dry and fair; and, in the same spirit, I count him my master in this art who can make a day's work in Autumn or Winter save a day's work in Spring or Summer. Show me a farmer who has no land plowed when May opens, and is just waking up to a consciousness that his fences need mending and his trees want trimming, and I will guess that the sheriff will be after him before May comes 'round again.

There is no superstition in the belief that land is (or may be) enriched by Fall Plowing. The Autumn Gales are freighted with the more volatile elements of decaying vegetation.—These, taken up wherever they are given off in excess, are wafted to and deposited in the soils best fitted for their reception. Regarded simply as a Method of fertilizing, I do not say that Fall Plowing is the cheapest; I do say that any poor field, if well plowed in the Fall, will be in better heart next Spring, for what wind and rain will meantime have deposited thereon. Frost, too, in any region where the ground freezes, and especially where it freezes and thaws repeatedly, plays an important and beneficent part in aerating and pulverizing a freshly plowed soil, especially one thrown up into ridges, so as to be most thoroughly exposed to the action of the more volatile elements. The farmer who has a good team may profitably keep the plow running in Autumn until every rood that he means to till next season has been thoroughly pulverized.

In this section, our minute chequer-work of fences operates to instruct and impede Plowing. Our predecessors wished to clear their fields, at least superficially, of the loose, troublesome bowlders of granite wherewith they were so thickly sown; they mistakenly fancied that they could lighten their own toil by sending their cattle to graze, browse and gnaw, wherever a crop was not actually on the ground; so they fenced their farms into patches of two or ten acres, and thought they had thereby increased their value! That was a sad miscalculation. Weeds, briars and bushes were sheltered and nourished by these walls; weasels, rats, and other destructive animals, found protection and impunity therein; a wide belt on either side was made useless or worse; while Plowing was rendered laborious, difficult and inefficient, by the necessity of turning after every few hundred steps. We are growing slowly wiser, and burying a part of these walls, or building them into concrete barns or other useful structures; but they are still far to plentiful, and need to be dealt with more sternly. O squatter on a wide prairie on the bleak Plains, or in a broad Pacific Valley, where wood must be hauled for miles and loose stone are rarely visible, thank God for thy benignant dispensation which has precluded you from half spoiling your farm by a multiplicity of obstructing, deforming fences, and so left its soil free and open to be everywhere pervaded, loosened, permeated, by the renovating Plow!

Suitable for all Buildings, Dwellings, Barns, Churches Factories, &c, and for all climates; equally adapted to flat or steep roofs, and can be applied by any ordinary workman.

THE READY ROOFING

Is more durable than tin, and does not cost one-half as much. It is cheaper than shingles, far more durable, and fire-proof. It is made of the heaviest fabric ever used for the purpose, and is put up in rolls ready for shipment to any part of the world. Send for circular and samples (sent free.)

We also manufacture

GRANITE CEMENT,

For repairing all kinds of leaky roofs, chimneys, sky lights, &c. This Roofing Cement forms a permanent adhesive coating over the whole surface of all roofs, whether tin, shingle or composition, completely closing up leakages, and being composed largely of ground granite, which sets and hardens, and soon becomes an artificial Slate or Stone covering.

ROOF PAINT,

For coating Tin and all kinds of metal and composition roofs. It will not run, crack, or peal off, but form a permanent and perfect protection, wherever placed. It is furnished at half the cost, and possesses twice the durability of the common oil paints used for such purposes.

County rights for sale.
